Western Big 3 Stand Firm on Berlin Dispute

PARIS (AP)—Reassured that the Western Big Three will stand fast against Soviet pressure on West Berlin, the North Atlantic Allies turned today to critical disputes within the alliance.

The agreement Sunday on Berlin by the foreign ministers of Britain, France and the United States led off a week of formal conferences vital to Western Europe's future.

A communique said the Big Three foreign ministers "reaffirmed the determination of their governments to maintain their position and their rights with respect to Berlin, including the right of free access."

The statement rejected the Soviet proposal to give the East German Communist regime control of Allied traffic with West Berlin. In effect, the ministers ruled out suggestions that the West deal with the East Germans as agents of the Russians.

The three ministers — U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd — gave no indication of what counterproposals they would make in reply to the Soviet note of Nov. 27.

But they said they were agreed on the basic issues to be covered in their replies. They said they would consult with the other NATO allies in the NATO Council meeting beginning Tuesday and then would formulate their notes to the Soviets.

Premier Nikita Khrushchev in the Soviet note said the Soviets were withdrawing from the four-power occupation of Berlin. He proposed that West Berlin, 110 miles behind the Iron Curtain, be made a demilitarized free city. The Russians said regardless of what was worked out for West Berlin, they were giving the East Germans control of all communications within the city in six months.

The Western refusal to deal with the East Germans apparently left no alternative but force to insure access to the city if the Russians go ahead with the transfer of communication controls. The Russians have said they would constitute aggression against East Germany and that Soviet troops would go to the satellite regime's aid in accordance with the Warsaw Pact.

West German Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano joined in the later half of the three-hour conference at the Foreign Office. West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt also spent half an hour in the meeting, giving his views to the foreign ministers. Dulles told him after the meeting, "You don't need to be worried."

Today the Allies turned to trade and economic policy with a meeting of the 17-nation Organization for European Economic Cooperation. The OEEC includes all European members of the Atlantic Pact plus such neutral countries as Sweden, Switzerland and Austria.

The French recently rejected a British proposal to associate all 17 OEEC members in a free trade area. The British still are bitter over the French action, and their officials say that reprisals may have to be taken to defend the British economy. The Scandinavians and some other nations are saying the same.

Other items to be taken up during the meetings this week include: 1. France's determination for a bigger voice in the Atlantic Alliance. 2. Continental hesitation to accept American nuclear rocket bases. 3. The dangerous situation in Cyprus. 4. The fishing war in the North Atlantic, involving Icelandic and British ships.

Nationalists Say Mao To Lose Job

TAIPEI (AP)—Chinese Nationalist sources predict that Gen. Chu Teh will take over as head of the Red Chinese government from chairman Mao Tse-tung. The Nationalists also say that a face-saving way has been found to ease Mao out as head of the Communist party.

The change reportedly would be made to quiet unrest on the mainland. The sources made their predictions after reports from Nationalist underground agents that the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist party in an urgent session at Hankow had decided to replace Mao, now 65.

Coleman said other details of the inauguration program are to be announced later.

Gas Explosion Fatal to 6

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A darkroom technician who wanted to be a newspaper photographer stopped on his way home from work to take pictures of a gas main explosion. Minutes later, he and five other curious spectators lost their lives in a second blast.

Lester S. Kraft Jr., 29, a camera bug hired last September by the Allentown Call-Chronicle, was driving home late Saturday night after work. As he reached the outskirts of this southeastern Pennsylvania city, he saw a huge jet of flaming gas shoot up through the street paving from a broken main.

He parked and ran with his camera to the front porch of the 120-year-old Mountaineer Hotel, a good spot from which to see the spectacular fire. Others also had gathered on the porch, or near it, to watch.

Minutes later the second explosion ripped the building apart. Tons of brick and stone buried the six victims. Twenty-three others were injured, two critically.

The second blast was followed by a series of lesser explosions as leaking gas ignited in the streets around the hotel.

The operators of the hotel, actually a tavern with living quarters on the second floor, were Mr. and Mrs. George Andressack. Mrs. Andressack's timely warning to some 50 patrons probably kept the death toll down.

"I went to the cellar door after I smelled gas and when I opened it, the odor was very heavy," she said.

"I yelled to the patrons to put out their cigarettes and get out because I was afraid of an explosion.

Moments after the bar patrons left, the hotel was destroyed.

23 Cardinals Are Created by Pope John XXIII

2 U.S. Archbishops To Receive Red Hats At Rites Wednesday

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John XXIII today formally elevated the archbishops of Philadelphia and Boston and 21 other Roman Catholic prelates to the rank of cardinal.

Twenty-three of the 51 other princes of the church, meeting in secret consistory at the Vatican, gave their silent assent to the Pope's action, confirming the choices he had announced Nov. 17.

The pontiff, himself crowned supreme ruler of the church only last month, increased the membership of the Sacred College to 74 and gave the world's half-billion members of the church their broadest representation ever in the high senate body.

Elevation of the new cardinals broke the limit of 70 set for the college by Pope Sixtus V in 1586.

In his address to the Sacred College telling of his choices, the pontiff called particular attention to the persecution of Catholics by the Communist regime in China. Missionaries have been expelled and many archbishops and bishops, "full of zeal and courage, are in prison, or restricted or impeded in the free exercise of their pastoral ministry," he said.

"The clergy and faithful have become the target of blandishments, menaces, physical and moral tortures," the Pope continued, in order to force them "to break the bond of obedience and love which links them with the See of Peter."

"Unfortunately," he went on, "we have to declare with sorrow that there are not wanting some who, fearing the orders of men more than the sacred judgment of God, have so far yielded to the commands of persecutors as to accept sacrilegious episcopal consecrations from which no power of jurisdiction can be derived since it was conferred without the mandate of the Holy See."

Pope John asked the Catholic bishops of the world to arrange for "public occasions of prayer and penance" to beseech God to "enlighten the minds of those who are going astray" and to "give strength or will" to all the Catholics of China.

After the consistory, papal messengers went out from the Vatican to notify the new cardinals officially of their elevation.

The two Americans, Richard James Cushing, 63, of Boston, and John F. O'Hara, 70, Philadelphia, received the word at the North American Pontifical College, high on Rome's Janiculum Hill. Also notified with news was Amleto Cicognani, whose elevation ended his 26-year tenure as apostolic delegate to the United States.

Soviets Seeking Belgian Explorers

LONDON (AP) — A Soviet flier searched across frozen antarctic wastes today for four Belgian explorers who abandoned their crashed plane and set out on foot.

The flier reported by radio early today that he had not found the men, who had set out Thursday for a supply depot 80 miles from the crash site.

Soviet pilot Viktor Perov found the wreckage of the Belgians' plane Sunday and landed his ski-equipped Li2, Soviet version of the DC3, to look for survivors. He then took off over the crevasse-dotted site and patrolled the area.

The Belgians' plane had been missing since Dec. 6. They are members of the Belgian antarctic expedition.

Series Details Odyssey of 3 Wise Men

GEORGE CORNELL

One of the most appealing chapters of the eternal story of Christmas is the odyssey of the "Wise Men from the East," who followed the light of a star to find and worship the Child of Bethlehem.

Despite its powerful elements of drama and mystery, most descriptions of the Magi and their trip are woefully brief and lacking in detail. The Gospels preserved only a short description of the visit of the strangers from the Orient; the human detail of that momentous pilgrimage has been in large measure lost in antiquity.

George Cornell, religion writer for the Associated Press and author of last year's memorable "Legacy of Luke" series, set out to fill in this shadowy section of the story of Christmas. The result is "The Journey to Jesus," a five-part series of articles.

Chiropractor Kills Mother, Remains Calm

PORTSMOUTH, Ohio (AP)—A 35-year-old chiropractor who appears unconcerned about it all faces a first degree murder charge today in the strangling of his mother.

The charge was filed today against Charles Arthur Stockham, a Portsmouth chiropractor. He failed to enter a plea on arraignment in Municipal Court and was bound over to the grand jury.

It was Stockham who called the sheriff's office Saturday night to report his mother's death, and deputies found him in her rural home at Slocum Station when they arrived.

A preliminary medical study indicates the victim, Mrs. Lucy Stockham, 66, died because the blood was shut off from her brain, authorities say.

Stockham told of becoming angry when his mother committed his father James, 65, a retired postal worker, to Portsmouth Receiving Hospital for mental illness, deputies said. He and his mother each threatened to have the other committed also, deputies added, and he strangled her when she taunted him.

When Stockham's son, Danny, 9, entered the room and asked what he was doing, deputies said Stockham replied he was putting the youngster's grandmother to sleep forever. Stockham is separated from his wife.

In Scioto County Jail, he has been reading magazines and clivincing little concern about what is happening, deputies said.

Murder Uncovers Illicit Moonshine

Columbus Bootlegger Says 'White Lightning' Bought 'South of WCH'

"White lightning," which one of the principals claimed was purchased "somewhere south of Washington C. H.," apparently was the stock in trade of a bootleg whiskey operation which was blown wide open Sunday with a murder on a Columbus East Side Street.

The moonshine turned up as detectives investigated the fatal shooting of 29-year-old Henry Hutchens. They arrested another Columbus man, Hutchens' 29-year-old brother-in-law, Asa Cole. In his rooming house, they found five bottles of bootleg whiskey.

Arresting Cole's father, Jeff, 45, detectives said they uncovered at least 90 more bottles. He admitted buying the corn liquor "somewhere south of Washington C. H.," they added.

THE FAYETTE COUNTY sheriff's office said it knew nothing of any moonshining operation in this area, adding that the source of supply in the Columbus case apparently is "somewhere south of Fayette County."

The younger Cole said he shot Hutchens after an argument over Cole's treatment of his sister, Hutchens' wife, police reported.

The shooting occurred about 12:15 a. m., when Hutchens went to Cole's house and accused Cole of beating his wife, Lexia. Detectives Dick Gordon and John McPeak said.

Cole followed Hutchens from the house. On the front porch, Cole fired at Hutchens. Standing on the sidewalk, he fell bleeding in a next-door yard.

HE DIED about an hour later at Grant Hospital. Dr. Carl E. Tetrick deputy coroner, said Hutchens was struck by about 30 pellets. He ruled homicide.

Police said the elder Cole said

Lawyers Stumped by Pacifist Who Objects To Any Appeal

Dewey said, "We think we have good grounds for an appeal," but he said the Rev. Mr. McCrackin's complete lack of cooperation with his attorneys "may present difficulties."

He said testimony failed to show the Internal Revenue Service agent who issued the summons had the authority to do so.

From his jail cell, the Rev. Mr. McCrackin said Saturday, "From the start I have said that this is not a legal battle."

"This is a moral struggle. It is a struggle against the evil of war and the evil of the involvement of the courts in the collection of funds for this evil."

"I have never denied that I ignored the summons."

"I don't want this fought through on a technical point as to whether the summons was properly issued, but on the point that a government does not have the right to coerce the conscience of its citizens."

The minister said he hopes to continue as pastor of the Presbyterian-Episcopal church here and as director of its neighborhood house.

Bishop Henry Wise Hobson of the Episcopal Diocese has indicated he would like the controversial minister dropped as the house director, but not as pastor.

Aiken Heads 10-Man Move

Opposition Is Seen To Bridges, Dirksen

WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of 10 Republicans who rate themselves as liberals voted unanimously today to undertake a fight for control of the Senate leadership of their party.

Their spokesman, Sen. George D. Aiken (R-Vt.) announced that they decided to present "a full slate of candidates at the Senate Republican conference in January which will be representative of the Republican party as shown by the voters in the last election."

The action posed the prospect of a fight with Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.), who apparently is Bridges' choice to succeed Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif.), as Republican floor leader.

The announcement came as Republican leaders met in the White House to hear President Eisenhower give details on his proposed general budget and defense spending.

Aiken said the group did not endorse any candidates today, but will do so when it meets again Dec. 30.

One of those at the meeting was Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California. Several of those present backed Kuchel for the post of Republican whip. Others who participated were Sen. John Sherman Cooper (Ky.); Sen.-elect Kenneth B. Keating and Sen. Jacob K. Javits of New York; Frank Carlson (Kan.); Clifford B. Case (N.J.); Sen.-elect Hugh Scott (Pa.) and Sen.-elect Winston L. Prouty (Vt.) and Sen. Prescott Bush (Conn.).

Aiken said all those at the meeting are strong supporters of President Eisenhower, but when asked if the White House had given them any encouragement, he said: "We haven't heard a peep from the White House, but we would welcome some encouragement from there."

He also said the movement had not been discussed with Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

GOP leaders said after the Eisenhower conference that the ad-congress a balanced budget calling for spending about $80 billion next year. The total compares with $79.2 billion this year.

Of the $80 billion, Bridges indicated that more than half would be for defense.

The emphasis on national security outlay came as somewhat of a surprise. Advance indications had been that military spending and foreign policy planning would be left for discussion.

The administration's general legislative program is up for review, with advance hints that it may include some controversial civil rights proposals.

Press secretary James C. Hagerty announced shortly after the start of today's session that it would deal primarily with the administration's domestic program, including a budget expected to call for spending of about 80 billion dollars. But Hagerty said it would be impossible to divorce national security from the rest of the program in any discussion.

Hagerty recalled that Eisenhower invited the Democratic leaders to sit in with the Republicans for a talk on foreign policy and defense spending plans at about this time.

The Democrats, he said, prefer to hold the two-party conference Jan. 5, just two days before the heavily Democratic new Congress convenes.

Underscoring efforts to rebuild Republican prestige and voter appeal, GOP National Chairman Meade ALCorn sat in on today's meeting at Eisenhower's request.

Also on hand were Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson, Dep. Secretary of Defense Donald Quarles, Undersecretary of State Christian A. Herter, and Budget Director Maurice Stans.

Columbus Bootlegger Says 'White Lightning' Bought 'South of WCH'

"White lightning," which one of the principals claimed was purchased "somewhere south of Washington C. H.," apparently was the stock in trade of a bootleg whiskey operation which was blown wide open Sunday with a murder on a Columbus East Side Street.

The moonshine turned up as detectives investigated the fatal shooting of 29-year-old Henry Hutchens. They arrested another Columbus man, Hutchens' 29-year-old brother-in-law, Asa Cole. In his rooming house, they found five bottles of bootleg whiskey.

Arresting Cole's father, Jeff, 45, detectives said they uncovered at least 90 more bottles. He admitted buying the corn liquor "somewhere south of Washington C. H.," they added.

THE FAYETTE COUNTY sheriff's office said it knew nothing of any moonshining operation in this area, adding that the source of supply in the Columbus case apparently is "somewhere south of Fayette County."

The younger Cole said he shot Hutchens after an argument over Cole's treatment of his sister, Hutchens' wife, police reported.

The shooting occurred about 12:15 a. m., when Hutchens went to Cole's house and accused Cole of beating his wife, Lexia. Detectives Dick Gordon and John McPeak said.

Cole followed Hutchens from the house. On the front porch, Cole fired at Hutchens. Standing on the sidewalk, he fell bleeding in a next-door yard.

HE DIED about an hour later at Grant Hospital. Dr. Carl E. Tetrick, deputy coroner, said Hutchens was struck by about 30 pellets. He ruled homicide.

Police said the elder Cole said

Lawyers Stumped by Pacifist Who Objects To Any Appeal

CINCINNATI (AP)—Two lawyers have one more week to decide the frustrating problem of whether to fight the conviction of a stubborn pacifist minister.

The Rev. Maurice F. McCrackin says he doesn't want an appeal on his conviction on a charge of ignoring a summons to an income tax conference.

His two court-appointed attorneys, convinced that the pastor erred in making remarks about taxes and other matters that were not in evidence and about which he was forbidden by the judge to touch upon.

He said he and Theodore M. Berry, the other court-appointed attorney, think they could file for a new trial.

Dewey said, "We feel the court erred in making remarks about taxes and other matters that were not in evidence and about which we were forbidden by the judge to touch upon."

Judge John H. Druffel presided at the one-day trial last Friday in U. S. District Court.

Before sentencing the minister to six months in prison and a $250 fine, the judge denounced him for his stand against paying income taxes because they help pay for war weapons.

Aiken Heads 10-Man Move

Opposition Is Seen To Bridges, Dirksen

WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of 10 Republicans who rate themselves as liberals voted unanimously today to undertake a fight for control of the Senate leadership of their party.

Their spokesman, Sen. George D. Aiken (R-Vt.) announced that they decided to present "a full slate of candidates at the Senate Republican conference in January which will be representative of the Republican party as shown by the voters in the last election."

The action posed the prospect of a fight with Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.), who apparently is Bridges' choice to succeed Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif.), as Republican floor leader.

The announcement came as Republican leaders met in the White House to hear President Eisenhower give details on his proposed general budget and defense spending.

Aiken said the group did not endorse any candidates today, but will do so when it meets again Dec. 30.

One of those at the meeting was Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California. Several of those present backed Kuchel for the post of Republican whip. Others who participated were Sen. John Sherman Cooper (Ky.); Sen.-elect Kenneth B. Keating and Sen. Jacob K. Javits of New York, Frank Carlson (Kan.), Clifford B. Case (N.J.), Sen.-elect Hugh Scott (Pa.) and Sen.-elect Winston L. Prouty (Vt.) and Sen. Prescott Bush (Conn.).

Aiken said all those at the meeting are strong supporters of President Eisenhower, but when asked if the White House had given them any encouragement, he said:

"We haven't heard a peep from the White House, but we would welcome some encouragement from there."

He also said the movement had not been discussed with Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

GOP leaders said after the Eisenhower conference that the ad-congress a balanced budget calling for spending about $80 billion next year. The total compares with $79.2 billion this year.

Of the $80 billion, Bridges indicated that more than half would be for defense.

The emphasis on national security outlay came as somewhat of a surprise. Advance indications had been that military spending and foreign policy planning would be left for discussion.

The administration's general legislative program is up for review, with advance hints that it may include some controversial civil rights proposals.

Press secretary James C. Hagerty announced shortly after the start of today's session that it would deal primarily with the administration's domestic program, including a budget expected to call for spending of about 80 billion dollars. But Hagerty said it would be impossible to divorce national security from the rest of the program in any discussion.

Hagerty recalled that Eisenhower invited the Democratic leaders to sit in with the Republicans for a talk on foreign policy and defense spending plans at about this time.

The Democrats, he said, prefer to hold the two-party conference Jan. 5, just two days before the heavily Democratic new Congress convenes.

Underscoring efforts to rebuild Republican prestige and voter appeal, GOP National Chairman Meade Alocrin sat in on today's meeting at Eisenhower's request.

Also on hand were Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson, Dep. Secretary of Defense Donald Quarles, Undersecretary of State Christian A. Herter, and Budget Director Maurice Stans.

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A darkroom technician who wanted to be a newspaper photographer stopped on his way home from work to take pictures of a gas main explosion. Minutes later, he and five other curious spectators lost their lives in a second blast.

Lester S. Kraft Jr., 29, a camera bug hired last September by the Allentown Call-Chronicle, was driving home late Saturday night after work. As he reached the outskirts of this southeastern Pennsylvania city, he saw a huge jet of flaming gas shoot up through the street paving from a broken main.

He parked and ran with his camera to the front porch of the 120-year-old Mountainville Hotel, a good spot from which to see the spectacular fire. Others also had gathered on the porch, or near it, to watch.

Minutes later the second explosion ripped the building apart. Tons of brick and stone buried the six victims. Twenty-three others were injured, two critically.

The second blast was followed by a series of lesser explosions as leaking gas ignited in the streets around the hotel.

The operators of the hotel, actually a tavern with living quarters on the second floor, were Mr. and Mrs. George Andresack. Mrs. Andresack's timely warning to some 50 patrons probably kept the death toll down.

"I went to the cellar door after I smelled gas and when I opened it, the odor was very heavy," she said.

"I yelled to the patrons to put out their cigarettes and get out because I was afraid of an explosion."

Moments after the bar patrons left, the hotel was destroyed.

Same Old Story On Weather: It's Darn Cold

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most of Ohio had zero-or-lower temperature readings again this morning.

Prospects are for some slight moderation tonight—but only by a few degrees. And light snow probably will be general throughout the state.

BBBBRRRR!

The thermometer in Washington C. H. continued to hang below the zero mark as it hit five below during the night and hovered around 4-degrees a good part of the morning.

It was the fifth time in a week that temperatures have dipped below the zero mark.

For the next five days, the weather bureau expects temperatures to remain from 6 to 10 degrees below normal.

Dayton was Ohio's coldest spot today according to the first reports reaching the weather bureau. The Gem City awoke to a minus-7 reading. Columbus had a 4-below and Findlay a 3-below. It was minus 2 at Cincinnati and Toledo, 1 above at Akron and 2 above at Cleveland.

Despite the continuing bitter cold in most sections of Ohio, only slight amounts of snow fell during the night. Roads are snow-covered and slippery only in the area north and east of a line marked by Cleveland, Chardon and Jefferson. The Ohio Turnpike is in normal condition.

December's spell of severe cold weather still clutched the Eastern two-thirds of the nation today. There appeared little or no general relief immediately.

The steady stream of arctic air from Canada kept pushing into the midlands and spreading south and eastward, dipping into the Gulf region. Adding to the unseasonable cold was heavy snow throughout the area, even in sections of the Southeast.

The cold and snow has plagued the Midwest for more than a week, but winter doesn't officially start until next Monday.

Chicago, like other Midwest cities, has had zero or below zero temperatures six times since the start of the cold wave. It was -7 early today, with lower marks in suburban areas.

The coldest weather was confined to the upper and middle Mississippi Valley and western sections of the Great Lakes region. Temperatures were mostly below zero and as low as 10 to 15 below in many places.

It was zero as far south as Fayetteville, Ark., as the icy air knifed into the South.

It was warmer in parts of northwestern Montana than in sections of Alabama and Louisiana. The mercury reached 35 degrees at Cut Bank and Great Falls, Mont. At the same time it was 29 at Mobile, Ala., and 33 at New Orleans.

Temperatures again dipped far below freezing in the Carolinas and to freezing and lower through Georgia and northern Florida.

Snow flurries continued in the Northeast part of the country, mainly in the Great Lakes region, the Ohio Valley and New England.

Stock Mart Trading Fairly Drab Today

NEW YORK (AP) — A handful of individual issues moved ahead today in a mixed and fairly drab stock market.

In early afternoon trading was running slightly ahead of Friday's slow pace but well behind the level of many previous sessions. Changes generally were under a point. Some of the favorites rose one to three points.

The market was pretty much a repeat of Friday when investors turned cautious, partly due to the Berlin crisis.

Metals, motors, and electronics issues showed plus signs. Steels and chemicals were irregular. Oils and aircrafts were a little lower. American Motors, Zenith and Goodyear rose two points or so. Eastern Air Lines was ahead a point, Westinghouse rose about a point and Warner-Lambert was well over a point.

Pfizer slipped a point or so and Du Pont about two.

Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. arrived on the Big Board, opening on a 15,000-share block at 59. It later traded around 56. The old common closed Friday on the American Stock Exchange at the equivalent of 53 1/2.

Government bonds eased.

Ohioan Gets U. S. Tax Bill Of $516,115

WASHINGTON (AP) — Internal revenue agents have billed Sydney J. Rudolph, a Lorain, Ohio, jeweler, for $516,115 in claimed back taxes and penalties.

The notice was sent to Rudolph at the Federal Correctional Institute at Milan, Mich. Papers filed at U. S. Tax Court here do not explain this point further.

In appealing the entire amount, Rudolph said the Internal Revenue Service based its claim—for the years 1943 through 1953—on an income of $1,242,452. He called that a fantastic figure.

A large portion of the claim also concerns Rudolph's wife, Madelon, of (2650 Skyline Drive), Lorain, but solely, the papers said, because she and her husband filed a joint return.

Among other things, the IRS claims Rudolph omitted sales reports for his firm, Seymour's Jewelry Co.

Brothers Seized by Police After Sister, 15, Is Beaten

A 17-year-old Washington C. H. youth and his older brother were jailed Sunday night after the juvenile allegedly beat his sister, who was taken to the hospital, and his brother wrestled with police after they arrested him, officers said.

Linda Paul, 15, of 411 Florence St., was admitted to Memorial Hospital with two black eyes and other injuries, the extent of which hospital officials didn't disclose.

Police said they are not sure what the scuffle was about.

The 17-year-old youth was held overnight in the police station and then released in the custody of Probate Court officials who did not release his name.

THE ELDER BROTHER, Herman, 21, of 636 Gibbs St., was arrested and charged with interfering with an officer and for disorderly conduct. His case was continued until Dec. 23 in Municipal Court Monday.

Police said they received a call about the girl and went to the hospital where they arrested the youth. The elder brother went with them to headquarters.

AS THEY were booking the younger brother, Herman, created a disturbance, officers said.

They told him they were arresting him on the charges, and a scuffle resulted before he was put into a cell. Police took him to the hospital where he was treated for a bruised leg and back, officers said.

The younger boy was placed in the custody of the officials who released him pending Juvenile Court proceedings on a charge of delinquency, they said.

Same Old Story On Weather: It's Darn Cold

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Most of Ohio had zero-or-lower temperature readings again this morning.

Prospects are for some slight moderation tonight—but only by a few degrees. And light snow probably will be general throughout the state.

BRRRRRR!

The thermometer in Washington C. H. continued to hang below the zero mark as it hit five below during the night and hovered around 4-degrees a good part of the morning.

It was the fifth time in a week that temperatures have dipped below the zero mark.

For the next five days, the weather bureau expects temperatures to remain from 6 to 10 degrees below normal.

Dayton was Ohio's coldest spot today according to the first reports reaching the weather bureau. The Gem City awoke to a minus-7 reading. Columbus had a 4-below and Findlay a 3-below. It was minus 2 at Cincinnati and Toledo, 1 above at Akron and 2 above at Cleveland.

Despite the continuing bitter cold in most sections of Ohio, only slight amounts of snow fell during the night. Roads are snow-covered and slippery only in the area north and east of a line marked by Cleveland, Chardon and Jefferson. The Ohio Turnpike is in normal condition.

December's spell of severe cold weather still clutched the Eastern two-thirds of the nation today. There appeared little or no general relief immediately.

The steady stream of arctic air from Canada kept pushing into the midlands and spreading south and eastward, dipping into the Gulf region. Adding to the unseasonable cold was heavy snow throughout the area, even in sections of the Southeast.

The cold and snow has plagued the Midwest for more than a week, but winter doesn't officially start until next Monday.

Chicago, like other Midwest cities, has had zero or below zero temperatures six times since the start of the cold wave. It was early today, with lower marks in suburban areas.

The coldest weather was confined to the upper and middle Mississippi Valley and western sections of the Great Lakes region. Temperatures were mostly below zero and as low as 10 to 15 below in many places.

It was zero as far south as Fayetteville, Ark., as the icy air knifed into the South.

It was warmer in parts of northwestern Montana than in sections of Alabama and Louisiana. The mercury reached 35 degrees at Cut Bank and Great Falls, Mont. At the same time it was 29 at Mobile, Ala., and 33 at New Orleans.

Temperatures again dipped far below freezing in the Carolinas and to freezing and lower through Georgia and northern Florida.

Snow flurries continued in the Northeast part of the country, mainly in the Great Lakes region, the Ohio Valley and New England.

RTW Group Bares Backing

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The leader of the ill-fated right-to-work proposal reported today that the security for a $392,000 campaign loan by a Columbus bank was posted in government bonds taken from the reserves of the Ohio Manufacturers Assn. and the Ohio Chamber of Commerce.

State Rep. Elton Kile (R-Madison), Chairman of the Committee for Proposal No. 2, Inc., made the report at the request of Secretary of State Ted W. Brown.

Kile said the chamber put up $358,000 worth of bonds and the manufacturers' group posted $50,000 value—a total of $408,000, par value.

The report showed the chamber also lent the campaign committee another $261,500 directly. That adds up that the chamber was involved financially in the right-to-work campaign for a total of $619,500.

Kile's report said the bonds posted for the bank loan represented reserves the two business groups accumulated over a period of years.

Band of Erudite Persian Scholars Scans Heavens for Promised Sign

Editor's Note: Down through the centuries, one of the most fascinating chapters of the immortal Christmas Story has been the Journey of the Magi. But despite its appeal, most of the details of that first pilgrimage to Bethlehem have been lost in antiquity. Here is the first of five articles carefully reconstructing the inspiring story of three men who unwaveringly followed the Star on a Journey to Jesus.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

As he had done each evening for months, Melchior climbed the circular stairs of the tower atop Mt. Vaus. He reached the roof, breathing heavily. He spread his arms there, gazing into the eastern quarter of the heavens.

His colleagues would be there shortly. The time cycle already had entered its penultimate phase, and they awaited a sign of its completion — the supreme "fravashi" foretold of old.

It was a spring dusk in the 31st year of the reign of the Parthian King Phraates IV in Persia (6 B.C.). For the company of Raomagh Mag Melchior, nature and careful computations had combined to bring about a state of acute vigilance.

They were Magi, the most renowned scholars of the age, members of the imperial order of priests, royal counselors and masters of ancient, recondite sciences that would be lost to the centuries to come.

"Guide us aright, thou living god, Ahura Mazda," Melchior lifted his bearded face as the first glints flickered the sky. "Oh, Thou Creator of Life, primeval Spirit, Thou Wise One, give light to us who seek Thy truth."

For nearly a year, as modern astronomy has since confirmed, a startling sequence of celestial phenomena had unfolded before these mystic sages. By their logic, the occurrences were more than enough to arouse keen suspense.

But in addition, there are specific Biblical and historical intimations that they had even weightier information to alert them at the time Jesus was born, a year subsequently misrepresented in fixing the Gregorian calendar.

All the evidence must have obsessed the elderly Melchior (one of varying names ascribed to him by early church tradition) as he and the other Magian noblemen gathered that night on their high lookout above the clear uplands of Persia.

They wore long, white robes, tied at the waist with silken sashes. Embroidered figures of a crescent moon and the planets adorned the rims of their caps. As darkness deepened, they spoke quietly but intently of the implications.

"An auspicious night," Melchior ambled about the platform, making sure each observer was at his assigned sector and had measuring dividers and bar. "Would that we could measure as well, my brothers, the visions of the inner eye."

To these authorities of the remote, mysterious "Zendavesta," most of which later was destroyed, knowledge came not from facts alone, but by finding in them the expression of spiritual laws — by piercing the tangible to learn the truth it signified.

They perceived a grand Divine interlinking of all time and space, from the least particle to the cos-mos. Each material appearance was relative, a mere manifestation of a basic substance all harmonized by a common, universal force.

To decipher its majestic messages, they studied the earth, water, the air—and the fiery stars.

Melchior, back at his desk, gave his associates a final reminder. "Take heed, my brothers. The finger of life oft writes in smallest script." Above the Pleiades winked and Aldebaran blazed red on the forehead of the bull.

"Tomorrow, a month hence, who can know? We have applied our subtlest mathematics, and looked long into the face of the fire. But who is man to read the hour of the Omnipotent? And yet, perchance, tonight!"

By every indication, they had available to them the cryptic, messianic time—data set down by the astounding Jewish seer, Daniel, who gave centuries before held powerful sway in the courts of Persian kings.

The Magi, as the land's ancestral savants, had opportunity then to grasp the enigmatic chronology for the coming of the Great One as given by the honored foreigner, Daniel, in his seventh, eighth and twelfth books.

They also could preserve his prophecies of the event: "Behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven... and there was given to him... glory and... everlasting dominion which shall not pass away."

Beyond this, however, other tenuous factors linked the Magi with Israel's hope of a redeemer. Far back in time, Abraham dwelt in Ur of the Chaldees, which modern archeology has located on the Persian Gulf.

Origins of the Magi's religion, of which Zoroaster Spitama was only a latter-day reformer, go deep into that same antiquity. Perhaps the shadowy Melchizedec, priest of the Most High God to whom Abraham paid tribute, was one of them.

Only they and the Jews, in all the pagan world, believed in one supreme deity.

The Magi's faith, too, foresaw a deliverer—"Sosiosh"—who would bestow everlasting, incorruptible life to mankind. Their archives also may well have included many of the Jewish prophecies of a savior.

Moreover, centuries before, the famed diviner, Balaam, son of Boer, a gentile like the Magi and also, like them, from the "mountains of the East," delivered his stunning oracle as recounted in Numbers 24:

"There shall come a star out of Jacob and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel. He that shall have dominion..."

So the Magi, endowed with their abstruse time deductions and the intermingled prescience of the past, had reason to watch the heavens. To them each turn of earthly destiny was reflected in nature—a "fravashi"—and they sought to detect it.

Three times in the past 10 months, marvelous displays (as determined by the astronomer Kepler 1,600 years later) had paraded before their gaze. There had been conjunctions of the planets Jupiter and Saturn in the previous spring, autumn and early winter.

It had now been four months since the first spectacle. To the Magi, four was a perfect number, represented in the four basic elements. If a fourth conjunction occurred, they could only conclude some prodigious meaning.

Melchior's old eyes roved with practiced familiarity among the sidereal landmarks. As Pleiades wheeled above the eastern horizon, he trained his attention there. Tidings in the constellation of fishes had the noblest import.

Shortly, his arm rose and he pointed a shaking finger. "Lo! The heavens speak! There, against the jeweled blackness, not only the great planets Jupiter and Saturn converged, but Mars, too, joining in a resplendent trigon.

Awed exclamations burst out on the rooftop and some Magians dropped to their knees. Gradually, however, they grew silent, watching the luminous solar embrace. Stillness, deep as the reaches of space, settled over them.

But then, suddenly, as if a door of a pit had opened to the sun, a new light flashed in the eastern firmament. A new star, a stella nova, a flame no astronomer ever proved or postulated, burst into the world's night.

Its brightness washed the earth. Its rays glittered like points of a crown. It opened a sublime might to the tired and groping, and silver dusted the city below and trimmed the ridges of the mountains of Zagros.

More Progressive and Liberal?

One of the most astounding recent statements issued by Paul Butler, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, expressed the conviction that the 86th Congress will be "somewhat more progressive and liberal than the 85th Congress."

While many accept with a grain of salt any statements by Butler, who has been the object of severe criticism by many in his party, his recent statement causes us to wonder, just what "More progressive and liberal" will mean.

A glimpse at the record of the 85th Congress will readily reveal why we are concerned. The past session of Congress, passed the first Civil Rights bill in 80 years (the other time such a bill was passed was in the days of Reconstruction), defeated the much needed and sensible bill proposed by Howard Smith of Va., which would have in effect, restrained a liberal, run-away Supreme Court; refused to enact legislation that would have cleaned up the corruption and racketeering in labor unions—this was refused even when the majority of union members apparently felt a need for reform legislation. This same 85th Congress followed what they called a "progressive" course, certainly as far as such "progressive" organizations as the Americans for Democratic Action, the AFL-CIO, etc., are concerned.

Butler goes into detail on obviously what he wants and hopes for from the 86th Congress. His prediction is, "I think there will be a substantial revision in Rule Twenty-Two." That rule is the one which outlines methods for shutting off debate or breaking a filibuster. It provides that when two-thirds of the membership of the Senate decide that debate should be ended, it can be stopped by such a vote.

For several years many Americans have been deeply concerned over the obviously downward road this nation is traveling toward socialism, centralization of power in the hands of the bureaucrats in Washington, utter disregard for State Rights, attempts to crush private enterprises and the loss of certain basic freedoms. In addition, we as a nation through the action of selfish, vote-getting, power-mad politicians, have traveled to the very brink of financial insolvency, the direct result of waste and deficit spending in government circles.

We shudder to think what will happen if the desire of Butler is carried out in the next session of Congress. There is a faint ray of hope peeping through the clouds. The possibility of a coalition of conservative Democrats and conservative Republicans could run the 86th Congress.

This may not happen, but it is still possible, even in spite of the Democratic sweep, and will be revealed if one closely studies the membership of both parties. We trust our hope will come true, and that Mr. Butler's prediction will fall by the wayside.

It is a pity that the South-Hating National Democratic chairman did not spell out and offer a thorough explanation of his desire for "a more progressive and liberal Congress."

We imagine that if Butler's hopes were given in detail it would even shock some of his so-called liberal followers.

Yanks Bet $30 Billion Yearly

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail.

That Americans lead the world in betting—if only because they have more to bet with. It was recently estimated that U.S. gambling—legal and illegal—amounts to about 30 billion dollars annually.

The Press and Its Freedom

By George Sokolsky

The first essential of a free press is the ability for publications to earn expenses without depending upon subsidies. The moment a newspaper is forced to accept a subsidy from a political party or a government or a group of rich men for continued existence, then it ceases to be free.

Except in those countries where the press depends upon advertising can it be politically and socially free, not because advertisers are idealists but because they cannot afford to mix their business with their product.

Just as many Democrats use soap as Republicans and just as many Republicans use automobiles as Democrats. In fact, even socialists wash their faces.

Thus, the logic of the situation rather than the virtue either of the advertiser or the newspaper publisher has kept our press singularly free of outside control.

The great editors of the 19th and early 20th centuries, before the press faced radio and TV competition, William Randolph Hearst, Joseph Pulitzer, William Allen White, Henry Watterson and I could list dozens of others, would just as soon tell a heavy advertiser to jump into a lake as to take his check.

They were men of singular independence and ran their newspapers as they chose without regard for official approval or social relationships.

Also, they were members of a proud calling, important in the affairs of the country and surprisingly unafraid. Their principal task was that of being a constant critic of the government.

It was the newspapers which performed many of the tasks which congressional committees do today. Unafraid, their reporters were out to catch the thieves in public office and it was newspaper editors and newspaper cartoonists who exposed the sanctimonious stuffed-shirts who posed as saints and robbed the poor.

Tom Nast and F. B. Oppen, to mention two great names, served America as any soldier in the field. Lincoln Steffens, Charles Edward Russell, Upton Sinclair and dozens of other daring men freely spoke their minds and saved human beings and the country.

That was a wholesome function of the press and still is, but to maintain this strong position the press must be financially independent. It must be able to say to an advertiser that if he does not care for the way the paper is managed, he can take his wares elsewhere.

It must be possible for newspaper editors and publisher to avoid tangling friendships. It means that each newspaper group is a fraternity of men who respect each other's integrity and work for something more than their money pay.

If American newspapers do not seem to be as courageous as they used to be, there are reasons and the reasons are not far to seek.

1. The cost of operations of a newspaper has gone up beyond reason, principally because of labor costs and the cost of paper. Labor costs rise as the big city press is increasingly proletarianized by labor unions which may dominate the working staff in all departments, including the editorial.

Also, it has become increasingly difficult to fire employees which means that dead-heads can continue to hold positions not because of ability but because of union protection.

One of the most severe difficulties of current newspaper management is the inability of management to tell a reporter to go to some other newspaper where his wares would be more welcome.

Perhaps that is why there are no newspaper writers of the brilliance of Edgar Allan Poe and O. Henry who did find editorial refuge in the old "New York Sun."

Today, such men would take their union pay, work 40 hours a week on a newspaper and spend the rest of the day being a press agent for some restaurant or a presumptive star.

2. Another difficulty is government censorship of news. Were there no columnists, daring, not afraid to be called liars, government officials would find ways of so manipulating the news as to make all publications, newspapers, magazines, radio and TV, creatures of government press agents.

The columnists still break through this very tight band which the government has set about the truth. This difficulty arises out of the permanent war during which government officials take advantage of public nervousness to protect their own errors and their own lies.

As long as this is possible, the danger is that the press loses its social value as the protector of the people.

THE DAY BEFORE elections in Vermont, a girl called a Burlington newspaper office and anxiously inquired, "Can you recall the name of the Democratic candidate for governor in tomorrow's election?" The clerk admitted, "I don't believe our paper knows there is a Democratic candidate. Why don't you call Democratic headquarters?" There was a brief pause, and then the girl admitted sheepishly, "This is Democratic headquarters."

Diet and Health Men also Should Know Breast Cancer Signs

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

YOU DON'T hear much about cancer of the breast among men. And while this is true because it is a comparatively rare disease, especially when compared with the incidence of female breast cancer, it does occur.

Moreover, it generally progresses undetected for a much longer period—an average of about two and one-third years—than a similar cancer in a woman.

Know Symptoms I think all men, and those past fifty especially, should be familiar with the early symptoms and the progress of the disease.

Generally, cancer of the breast strikes men between the ages of 52 and 61, although there is at least one case on record in which a 12-year-old boy was a victim. But this is an exception to the rule.

Delay Common You would think that any tumor at this site would be noticed quickly, since there is virtually no fatty tissue to hide it. Unfortunately a delay of four or more years before such tumors are reported is not uncommon. And there is a record of one man who had a tumor for 44 years before it was found.

There are two main reasons for this. For one thing, breast tumors in men grow at a comparatively slower rate than do similar tumors in women. For another, men wait considerably longer to report symptoms to doctors.

Don't Wait Unfortunately, they sometimes wait too long. Generally, a mass swelling is the earliest recognizable symptom of male breast cancer.

Although ulceration of the nipple and retraction of the overlying skin and the nipple are also characteristic symptoms of cancer, they occur less frequently.

Skin Changes Dimpling when coupled with skin changes is also a common symptom.

Either a serious or bloody discharge from the nipple is an early symptom in about 75 per cent of the cases and often is the first symptom.

Pain, or more probably a sensation of discomfort, often occurs.

Consult Doctor As I always like to point out, these symptoms do not necessarily mean cancer. But they do mean a doctor should be consulted quickly.

In most cases of male breast cancer, surgery is indicated.

QUESTION AND ANSWER F. S.: What causes a swollen gland under the chin to recur from time to time, and what is the best treatment for this condition?

Answer: A swollen gland under the chin may result from an infection in the area of the lower teeth, gums and floor of the mouth. Sometimes a small cyst in this area is mistaken for a gland.

Don't neglect this condition. See your doctor.

People . . . Places . . . and Things

Round about Fayette County

By B. E. KELLEY

During the past 10 days I have had reports from a number of persons who have seen flocks of hen pheasants and some cock pheasants along the highways and about feed lots, where they were seeking food.

The largest flock of which included both hen and cock birds, was seen by Arthur Engle, Thursday evening, along the Danville Rd., a half mile north of Bloomingburg, where upward of 100 birds were in the brush along a little stream, and another flock was on the same farm not far distant.

Friday morning Mr. and Mrs. Engle saw 40 to 50 feeding on the same farm, and they appeared not the least frightened by passing cars.

A number of farmers have found the pheasants, during the heavy snow, feeding about their premises, and have made it a point to see they are provided with food.

Pheasants and other birds are finding the multiflora fence rows very much to their liking, for they not only provide shelter and protection, but the berries afford an adequate food supply.

Indications are the carry over of pheasants is large, due to the fact that so many farms are posted against hunting, and the owners enforced the posting to the letter, thus saving large numbers of pheasants from being bagged by the big army of hunters who tramped the fields of Fayette County.

It has been about 55 years since I saw my first ring-necked pheasant on a farm in Paint Township, and it was one of the first introduced in this part of Ohio.

"I remember trailing the bird nearly a mile through the snow before I got a glimpse of it as it arose from a grown-up fence row and flew rapidly away."

"PULSE WARMERS"

Recent severe weather brings to mind when it was more necessary than stylish to wear knitted woolen wristlets which were also called "pulse warmers."

These "wristlets" were about four inches long, slipped over the hands and fitted snugly about the wrists, offering real protection from biting winds which insisted on nipping those areas between mittens and the coat sleeves.

These old woolen accessories were in common use until the horse and buggy days gave way to closed automobiles, and it was necessary no longer for children and adults to be exposed to the weather—either in open vehicles or walking to and from school and other places.

In fact the automobile put an end to a great of walking and exposure to the weather, and took humanity off its feet.

YES, IT'S FALL WEATHER!

Well, maybe it all makes sense, but you know winter does not begin until December 22.

That leads me to the belief that we certainly are having a rugged fall, and if the winter is still worse—well, woe is me!

Come to think of it we've had more than our share of intensely cold autumns and as a result some of the coldest weather over a long period of years has been in the fall—late fall, that is.

Remember that rugged weather we had a Thanksgiving time eight years ago? I thought you would. And 41 years ago the mercury slid down to 17.5 below zero on December 11, 1917. Yes, that was more FALL weather.

Of course the beginning of fall was like a lamb compared with the roaring lion kind of weather that came later this autumn.

It frequently happens that the worst weather of the season comes in the fall as it has this time.

Come to think of it the winter weather is not so bad after all for rarely in the winter does the mercury tumble to these sub-zero readings.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Eighty-Third Division was scheduled for an early return from France.

The Red Cross campaign here was expected to add 4,000 names to the 6,000 who contributed to War Chest.

Continued rains and mild weather were causing serious damage to highways in the county.

Plans were being made for rebuilding a large section of the highway to Columbus.

Dr. C. E. Page, 63, widely known dentist, died here.

Ohio Workmen's Compensation act was being widely copied by other states as a model statute.

Cpl. Howard Rogers youngest member of M Company was home from France with bad wound in one foot.

Dr. E. F. Todhunter returned to his practice here after serving in the U. S. Medical Corps in France.

Decision was reached not to begin the new post office building here until 1920 or later.

Honeybees were flying about in large numbers all day on Dec. 18. Mrs. John T. Morris had knit 52 pairs of socks for U. S. soldiers during the past year.

George Wilson, with British army for many years and stationed at Gibraltar for two years, was found dead in a room back of the Herald Office in the McLean building.

To fill its own domestic needs, Spain replaces the olive oil it ships to the world by large imports of other vegetable oils from the U.S.

More Progressive and Liberal?

One of the most astounding recent statements issued by Paul Butler, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, expressed the conviction that the 86th Congress will be "somewhat more progressive and liberal than the 85th Congress."

While many accept with a grain of salt any statements by Butler, who has been the object of severe criticism by many in his party, his recent statement causes us to wonder, just what "More progressive and liberal" will mean.

A glimpse at the record of the 85th Congress will readily reveal why we are concerned. The past session of Congress, passed the first Civil Rights bill in 80 years (the other time such a bill was passed was in the days of Reconstruction), defeated the much needed and sensible bill proposed by Howard Smith of Va., which would have in effect, restrained a liberal, run-away Supreme Court; refused to enact legislation that would have cleaned up the corruption and racketeering in labor unions—this was refused even when the majority of union members apparently felt a need for reform legislation. This same 85th Congress followed what they called a "progressive" course, certainly as far as such "progressive" organizations as the Americans for Democratic Action, the AFL-CIO, etc., are concerned.

Butler goes into detail on obviously what he wants and hopes for from the 86th Congress. His prediction is, "I think there will be a substantial revision in Rule Twenty-Two." That rule is the one which outlines methods for shutting off debate or breaking a filibuster. It provides that when two-thirds of the membership of the Senate decide that debate should be ended, it can be stopped by such a vote.

For several years many Americans have been deeply concerned over the obviously downward road this nation is traveling toward socialism, centralization of power in the hands of the bureaucrats in Washington, utter disregard for State Rights, attempts to crush private enterprises and the loss of certain basic freedoms. In addition, we as a nation through the action of selfish, vote-getting, power-mad politicians, have traveled to the very brink of financial insolvency, the direct result of waste and deficit spending in government circles.

We shudder to think what will happen if the desire of Butler is carried out in the next session of Congress.

There is a faint ray of hope peeping through the clouds. The possibility of a coalition of conservative Democrats and conservative Republicans could run the 86th Congress.

This may not happen, but it is still possible, even in spite of the Democratic sweep, and will be revealed if one closely studies the membership of both parties.

We trust our hope will come true, and that Mr. Butler's prediction will fall by the wayside.

It is a pity that the South-Hating National Democratic chairman did not spell out and offer a thorough explanation of his desire for "a more progressive and liberal congress."

We imagine that if Butler's hopes were given in detail it would even shock some of his so-called liberal followers.

The Press and Its Freedom

By George Sokolsky

The first essential of a free press is the ability for publication to earn expenses without depending upon subsidies. The moment a newspaper is forced to accept a subsidy from a political party or a government or a group of rich men for continued existence, then it ceases to be free.

Except in those countries where the press depends upon advertising can it be politically and socially free, not because advertisers are idealists but because they cannot afford to smirch their business with their product.

Just as many Democrats use soap as Republicans and just as many Republicans use automobiles as Democrats. In fact, even socialists wash their faces.

Thus, the logic of the situation rather than the virtue either of the advertiser or the newspaper publisher has kept our press singularly free of outside control.

The great editors of the 19th and early 20th centuries, before the press faced radio and TV competition, William Randolph Hearst, Joseph Pulitzer, William Allen White, Henry Watterson and I could list dozens of others, would just as soon tell a heavy advertiser to jump into a lake as to take his check.

They were men of singular independence and ran their newspapers as they chose without regard for official approval or social relationships.

Also, they were members of a proud calling, important in the affairs of the country and surprisingly unafraid. Their principal task was that of being a constant critic of the government.

It was the newspapers which performed many of the tasks which congressional committees do today. Unafraid, their reporters were out to catch the thieves in public office and it was newspaper editors and newspaper cartoonists who exposed the sanctimonious stuffed-shirts who posed as saints and robbed the poor.

Tom Nast and F. B. Oppen, to mention two great names, served America as any soldier in the field. Lincoln Steffens, Charles Edward Russell, Upton Sinclair and dozens of other daring men freely spoke their minds and saved human beings and the country.

That was a wholesome function of the press and still is, but to maintain this strong position the press must be financially independent. It must be able to say to an advertiser that if he does not care for the way the paper is managed, he can take his wares elsewhere.

It must be possible for newspaper editors and publisher to avoid tangling friendships. It means that each newspaper group is a fraternity of men who respect each other's integrity and work for something more than their money pay.

If American newspapers do not seem to be as courageous as they used to be, there are reasons and the reasons are not far to seek:

1. The cost of operations of a newspaper has gone up beyond reason, principally because of labor costs and the cost of paper. Labor costs rise as the big city press is increasingly proletarianized by labor unions which may dominate the working staff in all departments, including the editorial.

Also, it has become increasingly difficult to fire employees which means that dead-heads can continue to hold positions not because of ability but because of union protection.

One of the most severe difficulties of current newspaper management is the inability of management to tell a reporter to go to some other newspaper where his wares would be more welcome.

Perhaps that is why there are no newspaper writers of the brilliance of Edgar Allan Poe and O. Henry who did find editorial refuge in the old "New York Sun."

Today, such men would take their union pay, work 40 hours a week on a newspaper and spend the rest of the day being a press agent for some restaurant or a presumptive star.

2. Another difficulty is government censorship of news. Were there no columnists, daring, not afraid to be called liars, government officials would find ways of so manipulating the news as to make all publications, newspapers, magazines, radio and TV, creatures of government press agents.

The columnists still break through this very tight band which the government has set about the truth. This difficulty arises out of the permanent war during which government officials take advantage of public nervousness to protect their own errors and their own lies.

As long as this is possible, the danger is that the press loses its social value as the protector of the people.

Try and Stop Me

—By BENNETT CERF

THE DAY BEFORE elections in Vermont, a girl called a Burlington newspaper office and anxiously inquired, "Can you recall the name of the Democratic candidate for governor in tomorrow's election?" The clerk admitted, "I don't believe our paper knows there is a Democratic candidate. Why don't you call Democratic headquarters?" There was a brief pause, and then the girl admitted sheepishly, "This is Democratic headquarters."

The day before Thanksgiving, one turkey strutted up to another and said, "When our blasted owner's looking the other way, let's make a break for freedom."

"Count me out," answered the first gobbler. "On a day like this, you don't catch me sticking my neck out."

The crooner whose last four records had sold over a million looked out at his swimming pool one morning, and rang for his butler. "Jeeves," he yawned, "the pool needs restocking. Order a couple of dozen blondes."

Diet and Health Men also Should Know Breast Cancer Signs

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

YOU DON'T hear much about cancer of the breast among men. And while this is true because it is a comparatively rare disease, especially when compared with the incidence of female breast cancer, it does occur.

Moreover, it generally progresses undetected for a much longer period—an average of about two and one-third years—than a similar cancer in a woman.

Know Symptoms

I think all men, and those past fifty especially, should be familiar with the early symptoms and the progress of the disease.

Generally, cancer of the breast strikes men between the ages of 52 and 61, although there is at least one case on record in which a 12-year-old boy was a victim. But this is an exception to the rule.

Delay Common

You would think that any tumor at this site would be noticed quickly, since there is virtually no fatty tissue to hide it. Unfortunately a delay of four or more years before such tumors are reported is not uncommon. And there is a record of one man who had a tumor for 44 years before it was found.

There are two main reasons for this.

For one thing, breast tumors in men grow at a comparatively slower rate than do similar tumors in women. For another, men wait considerably longer to report symptoms to doctors.

© 1958, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Don't Wait

Unfortunately, they sometimes wait too long.

Generally, a mass swelling is the earliest recognizable symptom of male breast cancer.

Although ulceration of the nipple and retraction of the overlying skin and the nipple are also characteristic symptoms of cancer, they occur less frequently.

Skin Changes

Dimpling when coupled with skin changes is also a common symptom.

Either a serious or bloody discharge from the nipple is an early symptom in about 75 per cent of the cases and often is the first symptom.

Pain, or more probably a sensation of discomfort, often occurs.

Consult Doctor

As I always like to point out, these symptoms do not necessarily mean cancer. But they do mean a doctor should be consulted quickly.

In most cases of male breast cancer, surgery is indicated.

Santa and the ELF BOY

by LUCRECE HUDGINS BEALE

SYNOPSIS: Esteban found the bottle of gas with which the professor plans to kill the fairies. But the professor trapped him and opened a trap door beneath him. As Esteban falls he tosses the bottle to the professor to keep it from breaking.

CHAPTER TEN THE MOLE HOLE

Down, down, down went Esteban in a hole that seemed to have no bottom. Faster and faster he went. He thought that when he landed he would surely be crushed.

Suddenly he did land—right on his head! But he wasn't even hurt. For he landed on a bed.

It was a teeny bed with fat, white pillows and a bright red blanket. On a table by the bed stood a tiny lamp glowing brightly.

There was a tiny rocking chair nearby and a wash stand with a tiny wash bowl on it.

On a shelf there were some tiny books. Esteban picked up one of the books. It was called "Digging for Fun."

Esteban shook his head in puzzlement. Could he possibly have gone right through the earth and landed on the other side of the world? But why would people there live in such small houses?

Just then he heard a scraping noise. The scraping grew louder until finally there was a great big thump and a hole was punched right through the wall.

Through the hole bounced a fat little mole with a top hat on his head and brief case in his paw. Great furry eyebrows hung over his tiny eyes and he wore glasses that were two inches thick.

He peered at Esteban in astonishment. "Gracious! I didn't expect guests!"

Hastily he took off his hat and began to bustle around the room, straightening the bed and dusting the books.

"Just a minute and we'll be cleaned up here. I'm sorry I was not here when you arrived, but I only moved in a few days ago and I've been terribly busy on the new roads, you know. Or perhaps you didn't know. Well, anyway, I'm home now and very glad to see you."

At this he stopped chattering and peered at Esteban through his two inch glasses. "By the way, who are you anyway?"

Esteban took a big breath. "I'm

Down, down Esteban fell into a strange weeny room

an elf," he began. "Good gracious!" said the mole. "You're awfully big for an elf. I don't suppose I've ever seen such a big elf."

"Well," explained Esteban. "I'm not an elf anymore. You see, I was an elf but I did everything wrong and made trouble for everyone so the Queen Fairy took away my wings and I'm a boy now. But I'm going to be an elf again if I'm a good boy."

The mole shook his head in wonder at such a story. "But, tell me," he asked. "How did you get into my bedroom?"

"The professor tricked me!" cried Esteban. "Now he has the bottle and I'll never be able to get it again!"

The mole took off his glasses and wearily rubbed his eyes. "I wish you'd just start at the beginning and tell me the whole story," he begged.

So Esteban told how Charlotte's mother had been put under a spell by the Hangdog Hag and could never wake again. How Charlotte's father, in order to destroy the witch, had made a gas that would kill not only the Hag but all fairies and elves in the world.

"And I must get to Santa Claus for help," finished Esteban. "But how will I ever get there?"

The fat little mole sat in his rocking chair and rocked busily. By and by, he smiled happily and bounced from the chair.

"The Snuke!" he cried. "What?" said Esteban. "The Snuke," said the mole. "The Snuke will get you there!"

One subject to be discussed is the establishment of an unlimited goal instead of a specific dollar target. "You can't fix a dollar ceiling on the lives of some 450,000 men, women and children who develop cancer each year," a society spokesman said.

Racing Pigeon Labeled Pest by Pennsy Judge

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP)—Are racing pigeons essential as Army reservists subject to immediate recall or are they dirty birds and undesirable in a city?

The Pittsburgh chapter of the American Racing Pigeon Union says racing pigeons are essential members of a community, especially since the Army has disbanded its own pigeon corps.

But Judge Benjamin Lencher has upheld municipal rulings that the birds are pests and undesirable. His ruling requires a Pittsburgh man to get rid of his flock of racing pigeons by Dec. 31.

The pigeon union says it will ask Pennsylvania Superior Court to settle the question.

CRAIG'S

Santa and the ELF BOY

by LUCRECE HUDGINS BEALE

SYNOPSIS: Esteban found the bottle of gas with which the professor plans to kill the fairies. But the professor trapped him and opened a trap door beneath him. As Esteban falls he tosses the bottle to the professor to keep it from breaking.

CHAPTER TEN
THE MOLE HOLE
Down, down, down went Esteban in a hole that seemed to have no bottom. Faster and faster he went. He thought that when he landed he would surely be crushed.

Suddenly he did land—right on his head! But he wasn't even hurt. For he landed on a bed.

It was a teeny bed with fat, white pillows and a bright red blanket. On a table by the bed stood a tiny lamp glowing brightly.

There was a tiny rocking chair nearby and a wash stand with a tiny wash bowl on it.

On a shelf there were some tiny books. Esteban picked up one of the books. It was called "Digging for Fun."

Esteban shook his head in puzzlement. Could he possibly have gone right through the earth and landed on the other side of the world? But why would people there live in such small houses?

Just then he heard a scraping noise. The scraping grew louder until finally there was a great big thump and a hole was punched right through the wall.

Through the hole bounced a fat little mole with a top hat on his head and brief case in his paw. Great furry eyebrows hung over his tiny eyes and he wore glasses that were two inches thick.

He peered at Esteban in astonishment. "Gracious! I didn't expect guests!"

Hastily he took off his hat and began to bustle around the room, straightening the bed and dusting the books.

"Just a minute and we'll be cleaned up here. I'm sorry I was not here when you arrived, but I only moved in a few days ago and I've been terribly busy on the new roads, you know. Or perhaps you didn't know. Well, anyway, I'm home now and very glad to see you."

At this he stopped chattering and peered at Esteban through his two inch glasses. "By the way, who are you anyway?"

Esteban took a big breath. "I'm

Down, down Esteban fell into a strange weeny room

an elf," he began. "Good gracious!" said the mole. "You're awfully big for an elf. I don't suppose I've ever seen such a big elf."

"Well," explained Esteban. "I'm not an elf anymore. You see, I was an elf but I did everything wrong and made trouble for everyone so the Queen Fairy took away my wings and I'm a boy now. But I'm going to be an elf again if I'm a good boy."

The mole shook his head in wonder at such a story. "But, tell me," he asked, "How did you get into my bedroom?"

"The professor tricked me!" cried Esteban. "Now he has the bottle and I'll never be able to get it again!"

The mole took off his glasses and wearily rubbed his eyes. "I wish you'd just start at the beginning and tell me the whole story," he begged.

So Esteban told how Charlotte's mother had been put under a spell by the Hangdog Hag and could never wake again. How Charlotte's father, in order to destroy the witch, had made a gas that would kill not only the Hag but all fairies and elves in the world.

"And I must get to Santa Claus for help," finished Esteban. "But how will I ever get there?"

The fat little mole sat in his rocking chair and rocked busily. By and by, he smiled happily and bounced from the chair.

"The Snuke!" he cried. "What?" said Esteban.

"The Snuke," said the mole. "The Snuke will get you there!"

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—American Cancer Society representatives from 10 states meet here today to prepare for next April's fund-raising campaign. Garden Club Will Give Rest Homes, Tray Favors Tray favors were displayed at the annual Christmas meeting of the Fayette Garden Club in the home of Mrs. Wash Lough.

The home was attractive with unusual and original Yuletide decorations made by the hostess. The Mantle and a Madonna arrangement were admired by the members.

Preceding the meeting a dessert course was served, carrying out the red and green color scheme. Mrs. Lough was assisted by Mrs. Claude Davis, Mrs. Ansel Kirkpatrick Sr., Mrs. P. C. Harlow and Mrs. C. S. Kelly.

The business session was opened by the president, Mrs. Lough, reading the poem, "What Is Christmas," written by Hal Boyle. Mrs. Davis, civic chairman, reported that the club's project at "the point" at Market St. and Columbus Ave. had been cleaned and put in order for the winter. Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who has served ed with a committee to restore the fountain at the Washington Cemetery, announced that the work had been completed, and that the Fayette Garden Club would assist with the flower bed in the Spring.

There could not be a better time than this Christmas to invest in good will, good will toward all men, she added. If nations did this, all nations would be great, she declared.

But there is a better thing than the observance of Christmas Day, and that is keeping Christmas, and if you keep it for a day, why not always, she asked.

An exchange of gifts was the occasion of much enjoyment.

The meeting was closed with the singing of Christmas carols, with Mrs. Lough at the organ.

Guests were Miss Norma Dodd, Miss Jeanette Roush and Miss Josephine Roush.

Wall Street Studies Trend In Profits

Bulls Bid Up Prices, Optimistic About
Business in 1959

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — There are some anxious eyes on business profits today in Wall Street.

The stock market, always sensitive to corporate earnings, is more so just now because the bulls have bid up prices to a point that will call for a steep climb in net income after taxes by many firms before their profits are in line with the optimism the bulls have underwritten.

The profit trend is on the up-grade at year end after a sharp drop in the first months of 1958. What Wall Street is scanning the reports to find is the strength of the trend and the chances of its continuing.

First of the annual profit and loss reports are coming in now from those companies whose fiscal year ends before the calendar year. Added to these are a flock of estimates by corporate executives of what 1958 earnings should be when the books are finally Wall Street.

From the early reports Wall Street is getting a hint at least as how 1958 profits will stack up with 1957's after all the annual reports are in a couple of months from now.

Some 56 corporations already have reported for their fiscal years. Of these 25 show gains in net income over the figures for the previous year, while 31 show declines. There are three reporting net losses this year, while the year before there were two.

Combined the 56 made $182,686,639, compared with $171,320,254 in the previous year, for an increase of 6.6 per cent.

But the results are weighted heavily by striking gains this year by two of the 56 companies.

American Motors reports profits of 26 million dollars this year, against a loss the year before of 11 1/2 million dollars.

And Minute Maid Corp. puts profits this year 4 1/2 million dollars, while reporting a loss of 2 1/2 million dollars the previous year. In both cases carryover tax credits sweeten the 1958 showings.

The other 54 companies by themselves would have shown combined profits off 17 per cent from the previous year.

Predictions from businessmen whose firms will close their books on New Year's Eve also show a mixed trend.

Railroads as a class are chalking up this year as a poor year. But the picture brightens as you go west. The Western roads are profitably moving bumper crops and Western business was hit only a glancing blow by the recession. Expecting better earnings this year than last are such roads as Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Illinois Central. Declining net income is predicted by the Louisville & Nashville and the Norfolk & Western.

News of Fayette Men in Service

Army PFC Jon C. Pensyl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark A. Pensyl, 332 E. Paint St., recently participated in a field training exercise with the 3d Division's 4th Infantry in Germany.

Pensyl, a radio operator in the infantry's Company B, arrived in Europe last May. He entered the Army in November 1957 and completed basic training at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The 23-year-old soldier, whose wife, Emilie, is with him in Germany, formerly worked at R. Brandenburg Motor Sales, Inc.

He was graduated from Washington High School in 1953 and from Ohio State University in 1957. He also attended the University of Cincinnati.

Marine Cpl. Joseph R. Oberschlake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Oberschlake of Route 5, joined members of the 10th Marine Regiment in a joint Army-Marine Corps field firing exercise during the first week in December at Fort Bragg, N. C.

The 10th, the artillery arm of the Second Marine Division, took part in the maneuvers familiar with the latest types of artillery employed by the present-day Army.

Upon completion of their training, the Marines returned to the Second Division's home base, Camp Lejeune, N. C.

George W. Hatfield, seaman, USN, son of C. B. Hatfield of Washington C. H., has arrived in San Francisco, aboard the attack cargo ship USS Chara after a seven-month tour of duty with the U. S. Seventh Fleet in the Far East.

During the cruise the Chara took part in fleet exercises, replenishing other floating units with ammunition.

Between operations the cargo vessel visited the Philippine Islands, Japan and Hong Kong.

Business Notes

SELECTED BY DUNCAN HINES
Two Washington C. H. establishments have received national recognition in the 1958 editions of Duncan Hines "Adventures in Good Eating" and "Lodging for a Night."

The Hotel Washington Coffee Shop and the Herefordshire Motel are included among 8,000 eating and lodging places, selected from a total of half a million in North America, as "Recommended by Duncan Hines."

Roy H. Park, vice president of Duncan Hines Institute, Ithaca, N. Y., said that the listings in the books are "authoritative and unbiased" and are based on "thorough inspection by the field inspectors, surveys and analysis by the Institute staff. No establishment ever pays for a listing."

STORE HAS NEW SIGN
Carpenter's Hardware Store, 115 N. Main St., has a Christmas gift of its own—a new sign of modernistic design, 4 feet wide and 8 feet long, that hangs over the sidewalk above the entrance.

The sign with "Carpenter's Hardware" on red neon tubing and "Majestic Paints" in yellow neon tubing against a black and yellow background, was designed and made by Joe Grim in his shop, 626 Clinton Ave.

There has been a hardware store in that room since 1887. The first one was established there by James and Will Ford. It has been the Carpenter Hardware Store for the last 38 years, since it was sold by the Ford Brothers in 1921.

TAX FORMS AVAILABLE
Federal income tax forms for the preparation of 1958 returns are now available in reasonable quantities to accountants, attorneys and other professional personnel who need advance copies, Wallace R. Kneisel, administrative officer of the Wilmington office of the Internal Revenue Service announces.

Individual taxpayers on record will receive their forms and instruction booklets through the mails during late December or early in January, Kneisel said.

BPO MERGES DEPARTMENTS
The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has announced that its Real Estate and Tax Departments have been consolidated into a new single department to be directed by Elmer E. Phipps. Phipps was formerly general real estate agent of the railroad. J. Harry Garner retains his position as tax agent. Phipps has been with the B&O since 1921 and associated with its real estate department since 1924, where he started as secretary. He advanced through various positions of increasing responsibility in the department and was promoted to special agent in 1945. He has been general real estate agent since 1951.

Giants Force Browns into Grid Playoff

Field Goal Brings Victory E'ge; Paul Brown 'Owner' Cited

NEW YORK (AP)—A field goal through the snow by a fellow who wasn't expected to play... the keen eyes of a battleworn Texan... and what everybody thought was a boner by football's master coach.

They added up today to a bonus for National Football League fans, next Sunday's playoff between the plucky New York Giants and the mighty Cleveland Browns for the Eastern Conference championship.

The two arch rivals tied for the regular season championship with 9-3 records Sunday as Texan Kyle Rote set up a touchdown with 10 minutes left, and hobbled Pat Summerall booted a 49-yard field goal with two minutes remaining to give New York a 13-10 victory. A tie would have given Cleveland the title.

The winner of next Sunday's playoff will play host to the Western champion Baltimore Colts Dec. 28 in the pro title game.

The other NFL clubs have completed their seasons. Baltimore led 21-12 to San Francisco Sunday.

Los Angeles and the Chicago Bears tied for second in the West with 8-4 marks as the Rams closed out with a 34-20 decision over the Detroit Lions 21-16. Washington blanked Philadelphia 20-0 in Sunday's other game. Pittsburgh, No. 3 in the East, finished Saturday with a 38-21 victory over the Chicago Cards.

It's doubtful the Giants would be still alive, if it hadn't been for a call by Paul Brown, the coach of pro football's greatest organization.

Leading 10-3 midway in the third period, the Browns drove to the New York 13 behind the great yards in 26 rushes. With fourth down and five to go, Lou (The toe) Groza stepped back to the 20 for his fourth field goal try of the game. He had missed twice, hit once—on the 22.

Four minutes later, the Giants drove from their 30 to Cleveland's 25. On fourth down, and with 4½ minutes remaining, Summerall missed a field goal from the 33. It looked as though the comeback had been nailed, but two minutes later the Browns' Dick Deschaine, soundly rushed by the Giants' defense, got off a wobbly 22-yard kick that went out of bounds on the Cleveland 43.

Three passes went awry before Summerall sent his booming field goal soaring through the snow and over the uprights. Two minutes and seven seconds showed on the clock.

The Giants have won two games outright with Summerall's minute kicks. He also boosted the three-point margin of victory in another.

In six weeks, beginning with the Giants' 24-21 upset of previously unbeaten Baltimore, Nov. 9, Summerall has kicked nine field goals in 13 attempts.

Before that, he'd managed only three in 10 attempts. He'd blown two conversions.

"I've been lousy," Summerall said at that time.

The 64, 230-pound, 38-year-old veteran only two minutes before had missed a relatively easy attempt from the 33 in Sunday's game.

"When I blew it," Summerall said, "I'd have liked to have gone anywhere but back to that bench. But you know, four or five of the guys came right up and told me to forget it, that they'd get me another chance."

"I never thought I'd get to try again," he said. "It's wonderful, wonderful, wonderful."

"On the one I missed, I figured it would fade from left a bit to right. It went straight as an arrow."

"On the last one, I just kicked straight ahead. I knew I had to hit it good since I was at about midfield. I did."

Cleveland Education Chieftain Dies at 79

CLEVELAND (AP)—Funeral services will be held Tuesday for Charles Henry Lake, 79, who was superintendent of Cleveland's public schools from 1933 to 1947. He died at his home in Shaker Heights Sunday. A native of Granville, Lake taught in Columbus and was principal at Hamilton High School before coming here in 1916.

Two League Tilts Friday

7 Games This Week For County Cage Teams

Of the seven games to be played by Fayette County cagers this week, only two will be league contests, and one of these will be played on a neutral floor.

The two league games, both of them Friday night, will see Bloomingburg's Bulldogs in action against the Mad Antons at Good Hope and Jeffersonville's Tigers and the Warriors of Madison Mills colliding on the large neutral Bloomingburg court.

In the other Friday night game, the Mt. Sterling cagers will be in New Holland to tangle with the Bulldogs there.

LeBaron Wins Pro Football Aerial Crown

WASHINGTON (AP)—Consistency won the 1958 National Football League passing title for Eddie LeBaron.

The sawed-off Washington Redskins' tosser finished the regular season Sunday with one of the smallest yardage totals by air among NFL quarterbacks.

But he beat 'em all for average gain with an unofficial 9.41 yards on 79 completions in 145 attempts. And that's the thing that paid off.

"I'll bet you hear some more hollering to change the system," LeBaron said.

LeBaron is perfectly satisfied with the system of ranking passers by average gain for loss rather than total yardage.

LeBaron connected on 7 of 17 for 164 yards Sunday, including one pass for 71 yards to Bill Anderson. That bomb capped the Redskins' 20-0 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Final official statistics haven't been compiled, but LeBaron's total overhead yardage of 1,365 is likely to be exceeded by all but half a dozen of the NFL's top 13 passers. He has thrown less frequently than any of them since the Redskins concentrated on the rush rather than the pass.

Next season probably will be LeBaron's last in pro football. "That's the way I feel now," the former College of the Pacific star said. He wants to get started on his law career.

He's near the head of his class at George Washington Law School.

Kirk Furnitures Reformatory Tilt

The Kirk Furnitures of New Holland ran into a cold second period and could never get warmed up again and lost, 69 to 57, to the boys at the Federal Reformatory Sunday afternoon.

Glenn Large and Kenny Kirk teamed up to pace the New Holland offense with a total of 34 points. Large got 9 field goals and a free throw for 19 and Kirk hit 6 from the field and 3 from the foul line for 15. Five other members of the New Holland Independents had a hand in the scoring.

This game was a keep-in-shape affair between the first and second halves of the Pickaway County League. Games are played in the Circleville Coliseum.

Bulldogs Lose To Teays Valley

Tough Battle Given Undefeated Cagers

The undefeated Teays Valley cagers made the Ashville team their fourth victim of the season Friday and Bloomingburg's Bulldogs their fifth at Bloomingburg Saturday night.

The 56 to 54 defeat was the sixth of the season for the Bulldogs. Of those six games, the Bulldogs have lost by 4, 3, 2 and 1 points. Three of these games were lost to still unbeaten teams.

Usually, the Bulldogs have been slow in getting started and have had to come from behind.

The Bulldogs threw up a tight defense that held the 6 foot 5 inch center, Sealock, to 3 field goals and a free throw. Meanwhile, however, Milburn and Melvin were hitting 14 of the 23 Teays Valley field goals from the outside.

The visitors started out fast and took a 10 - point lead in the first period. In the third period they were 18 points in front when the Bulldogs put on an all-court press and cut that lead in half.

Turning on the heat, the Bulldogs tied it up at 52-all in the last period and then went ahead 54 to 52. Sealock tipped one in to tie it up again. With time running out, Milburn dropped in the winning bucket.

Heistand and Welsh led the Bloomingburg scoring and overall good team play. Evans rebounded well for the Bulldogs in addition to getting 8 points.

Lonnie Ayers, a freshman, scored 8 points in the Reserve game and 6 in the one period he played with the Varsity.

Coach Everett Rudolph said that "in beating Madison Mills Friday night and coming from 18 points behind in Saturday's game, I feel our young team has jelled more in the last week than all the rest of the season."

The Bloomingburg Reserves won the preliminary, 57 to 23, with Lonnie Ayers getting 8 points, Gary Brown 9 and Richard Ayers 6.

Royals Granted Extra Time To Curtail Roster

CINCINNATI (AP)—Pro basketball teams are supposed to cut their rosters to 10 players today, but Cincinnati's Royals can put off the deadline if they want.

Because of the large number of rookies, the National Basketball Assn. last week offered Royal officials more time to complete the move.

The action is complicated by a puzzling illness of rookie St. Green, former Duquesne great, now in Christ Hospital here for tests. Three times this season he has been hit by temporary dizziness and weakness.

The Royals have 12 players now and team officials indicate that at least one of the men to be dropped as player is Tom Marshall, named team player-coach after veteran Bobby Wanzer was fired last month.

Syracuse Nats Staging Comeback

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The sizzling Syracuse Nationals certainly are extremists in the National Basketball Assn. The Nats lost eight straight only to take seven victory in a row.

The Nats now are within two games of co-leaders Boston and New York in the Eastern Division race after defeating the Detroit Pistons 101-95 in a nationally televised game Sunday.

Saturday night, Syracuse turned back the Philadelphia Warriors 115-100. The loss was Philadelphia's fifth straight and eighth in nine games.

In Sunday's other game, the New York Knicks moved into a first place tie with the Boston Celtics by shading the Minneapolis Lakers 100-99. The Knicks bowed to the St. Louis Hawks, Western leaders, 108-94 in Saturday night game.

There are now 27 whooping cranes (once almost extinct) wintering on the Arkansas National Wildlife Refuge on the Texas coast.

Basilio To Study Calhoun, Jones

CLEVELAND (AP)—When Rory Calhoun battles Ralph (Tiger) Jones in a 10-round middleweight scrap tonight both fighters will be working for a match with a ring-side spectator—Carmen Basilio.

Basilio, former welterweight and middleweight champion, has been offered $25,000 to meet the winner of the Calhoun-Jones fight. The offer comes from Cleveland promoter Larry Atkins, who promoted tonight's charity affair sponsored by the Cleveland News toyshop fund for needy children.

"Basilio must fight someone to keep active," Atkins said and added:

"It doesn't look as if Sugar Ray Robinson is interested in fighting. Carmen and his managers said they'd be at ringside tonight to look over Calhoun and Jones."

Ohio State Cagers Slated In Tourney of Big Outfits

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Ohio State will be rubbing elbows with some top-ranked basketball teams next weekend when the Buckeyes journey to Lexington for the University of Kentucky Invitational.

Coach Fred Taylor's youthful quintet, fresh from its first victory of the season, will be moving in fast company.

Bayer Grabs Top Money in Sanford Open

SANFORD, Fla. (AP)—George Bayer, who seemed destined to go through life without winning a golf tournament in the United States, has overcome that jinx.

The long-driving Glen Eagles, Ill., giant is $2,000 richer today as a result of his victory in the $15,000 Sanford Open Tournament Sunday, a victory achieved with a bunch of par busters breathing down his neck. Par was 71.

Taylor had started the final round with a two stroke lead and 204 for his first three rounds. Wes Ellis Jr. of Aldecress, N. J., was in second place.

When Bayer finished with a 68 for a 272, he had a one-stroke advantage and Ellis was tied for 10th place, five strokes back. Runerup was veteran Chick Harbert of Northville, Mich., who shot a sizzling 66 with a phenomenal 29 for the last nine holes.

Tom Nieporte of Bronxville, N. Y., also had a 29 for the last nine, giving him a 65 round, a 275 total and a tie for fourth place. He was deadlocked with Julius Boros of Mid Pines, N.C.; Art Wall Jr., of Pocono Manor, Pa.; Bo Wingler of Odessa, Tex.; and Jay Hebert of Sanford.

Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla., had a final 67 for a 274 total, good for third place.

In all, 27 players bettered par for their four rounds, with nine more equalling that figure.

U.S. Davis Cuppers Face Tests for Starting Roles

PERTH, Australia (AP)—U.S. Davis Cup Captain Perry Jones today ordered a series of test matches among his four team members to determine singles assignments for the interzone tennis finals against the Italians this weekend.

Pressure battles under tournament conditions were scheduled to start today, but were postponed until Tuesday at the request of Ham Richardson, America's No. 1 ranked player. Richardson asked for a day off to rest.

Jones said that Richardson will play Barry MacKay of Dayton, Ohio, Tuesday and Peruvian Alex Olmedo will take on Earl Buchholz Jr., 18-year-old member of the team from St. Louis. Both matches will be best two-of-three affairs.

Lions To Greet Indians With Revamped Lineup

A revamped WHS Lion lineup will tackle the SCO League-leading Hillsboro Indians when they invade Washington C. H. Tuesday night. Coach Gene Millard said Monday.

The Lions, currently tied with Wilmington for third place, will be handicapped to give a scrappy showing and should force the game right down to the final gun, Millard said.

It is a foregone conclusion that the Fayette Countians will be facing their toughest opponent of the year and must show a lot of heart to bring this one out of the bag.

The Indians are undefeated so far, having won all five of their games, and have scored 118 points to their opponents' 91 in two league games.

The Lions' loss to Circleville Friday night dropped them to a 2-3 season record and 1-1 in league games. The Tigers' win gave them a share of the league lead with Hillsboro.

Millard said his boys will be facing a well-balanced team, with league-leading Bosworth forcing the play with outside shots from his position as guard.

The WHS boys will go through a very light work out Monday night so they don't wear down the fine edge they are expected to have, Millard said.

He will check his decision then and announce the new starters Tuesday, the coach said.

Negro Cleric Defies Ban on Bus Boycott

BIRMINGHAM Ala. (AP) - A Negro minister, defied police warnings Sunday and urged Negroes to boycott segregated Birmingham buses.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth told his congregation: "You sin when you yield to the bus company's sin of segregation. I call upon you to use passive resistance to defeat this evil."

He was one of 20 Negro ministers who had said they would use their Sunday sermons to denounce Birmingham's bus segregation law. Apparently most of them used some variation of this topic.

No one was arrested although Police Commissioner Eugene Conner warned recently that anyone,
"white or black," leading an attempt to boycott Birmingham buses would be jailed.

Shuttlesworth was recently convicted of violating the city's bus seating law and sentenced to 90 days in jail and a $100 fine. He has filed an appeal. Twelve other Negroes also were convicted and received suspended sentences.

'King Cobras' Do Good Job Of Reforming

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) - The King Cobras, who reformed publicly 10 months ago, have made it stick.

They're the juvenile gang members who gave a "restitution dinner" last February after some of them took part in a grocery burglary.

The dinner netted $133.08 to more than repay the grocer. A judge gave them another chance.

"They're making good," said
James L. White, executive director of Neighborhood House, Inc., the social service agency that helped them with the public repayment dinner.

"Not one boy has been in trouble with the law since."

The King Cobras gang has been dissolved and the youths have gone separate ways.

The answer, says White, was
"redirection."

"Everyone has weaknesses—but he has strengths too. What we have done is built on their strengths."

Two of the boys organized a dance band. Several others made athletic teams at their schools.
Another has been elected to his school's student council.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—First targets of Mayor M. E. Senses-brenner's crackdown on merchants who open seven days a week will be furniture, appliance, hardware and department stores.

His drive is scheduled to open
Dec. 21. The mayor said enforcement of the state law forbidding Sunday sales will be delayed this weekend so that police can warn offenders. He said he hopes the public will cooperate by postponing purchases until Monday.

The mayor said he listed the four types of stores as initial targets because "the drive has to start somewhere." He said small grocery stores and drug stores will be left alone "as a matter of common sense."

State law forbids any person 14 years of age or older from engaging in work on Sunday, except in cases of necessity or charity.

Stores which close in observance of the Sabbath on Saturday may legally open on Sunday.

The United States Supreme Court last week refused to hear appeals of two Ohioans accused of violating the law.

Federal Mediator Joins Gotham Paper Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's top mediator formally joins negotiations today in an effort to end the six-day-old newspaper deliverymen's strike that has cut off publication of the city's nine major dailies.

Joseph F. Finnegan, national director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, meets with representatives of the striking Newspaper and Mail Deliverers Union and the Publishers Assn. of New York City when contract talks resume.

A publishers' spokesman said the papers would not resume publication until the deliverymen returned to work. The announcement followed an offer from more than 2,000 printers, members of the New York Typographical Union Local 6, to return to work.

Have you got your over-shoes? That's the standard question Alma gives me as I leave the house each morning. Again it's a small world. Dale Ward, Sam Marting, Joe Schoedinger and myself TWA'd out to Chicago Friday to attend the National Dairy equipment show. I offered to wager we would see someone we knew. Sure enough my good friends Ed Moser and his partner Mr. Myers were there. Then to top it off we sat down where there was a TV and headphones to hear easily, at exactly that moment I heard: This is WCHO at Washington Court House located thirty - nine miles southwest of Columbus, Ohio in Fayette County, Fayette County is noted for fine race horses and registered cattle. I looked at the screen and who was he interviewing? Ed Moser and Mr. Graumlich who were talking about Med-O-Pure. So we saw them twice. It was a terrific show. Outside of a cow everything I could see is done by machinery and I don't doubt some day some smart guy will replace her.

Chicago was covered with dirty sloppy snow. I wouldn't live there if they gave me the Palmer House to live in. Even the snow looks whiter here. Just looked at the thermometer, got to get that thing fixed. 4 below zero.

But to really enjoy this nice winter weather come out and get a new Chevrolet or Buick. They are noted for starting any kind of weather.

Have you got your over-shoes? That's the standard question Alma gives me as I leave the house each morning.

Again it's a small world. Dale Ward, Sam Marting Joe Schoedinger and myself TWA'd out to Chicago Friday to attend the National Dairy equipment show. I offered to waiter we would see someone we knew. Sure enough my good friends Ed Moser and his partner Mr. Myers were there. Then to top it off we sat down where there was a TV and headphones to hear easily, at exactly that moment I heard: This is WCHO at Washington Court House located thirty - nine miles southwest of Columbus, Ohio in Fayette County. Fayette County is noted for fine race horses and registered cattle. I looked at the screen and who was he interviewing? Ed Moser and Mr. Graumlich who were talking about Med-O-Pure. So we saw them twice. It was a terrific show. Outside of a cow everything I could see is done by machinery and I don't doubt some day some smart guy will replace her.

Chicago was covered with dirty sloppy snow. I wouldn't live there if they gave me the Palmer House to live in. Even the snow looks whiter here.

Just looked at the thermometer, got to get that thing fixed. Below zero.

But to really enjoy this nice winter weather come out and get a new Chevrolet or Buick. They are noted for starting any kind of weather.

DiSalle Plans Spending Based On Actual Need

'Wants' To Get Little
Consideration from Incoming Governor

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The incoming Democratic administration of Michael V. DiSalle will put the emphasis on needs.

The governor-elect made that policy clear in discussing plans to take over state operations from GOP Gov. C. William O'Neill Jan. 12.

Drawing a distinction between wants and needs, DiSalle said: "I don't think you can operate government according to wants because you may not be able to afford them."

"But needs should be taken care of. These are minimums that you can't get away from. I'm not going to disregard them no matter what happens."

Politics professed to see in the observations a touch of what helped DiSalle to a record-smashing election plurality. They noted that DiSalle carefully avoided any comment on possible new or increased taxes. He said the tough financial picture was under study.

O'Neill, throughout his two-year administration, stressed controls over state spending to avoid more taxes. He pointed to record highway and institutional building programs as promised major accomplishments.

Expanding his theme of caring for needs, DiSalle said there has been a "great deal of dissatisfaction" in spending levels maintained for mental hygiene.

He asserted the levels were minimum in many instances and that many areas were understaffed. "I am not prepared to accept existing levels if it means hardship and suffering," DiSalle added.

He said needs of state departments will be reviewed and priorities set, with mental health and aid for the aged at the top.

"A good administrator must review each department to see what it is there for," DiSalle explained. "You can't let a finance director make the philosophy. He wants them to operate within a financial level."

John A. Skipton, O'Neill's finance director, replied that spending controls were necessary to avoid unnecessary expense without reducing operating levels.

Early in the O'Neill administration, Skipton ordered department heads to spend no more than one-twelfth of their appropriations in any month during the period of one year.

DiSalle said it appears unlikely that his administration will spend more in the first half of next year than available from revenues.

Before the end of that period, he will prepare an operating budget for the state's two-year book-keeping period, starting next July 1, for consideration by the new Legislature.

It will be up to the Democratic-controlled Legislature to approve budget appropriations and the taxes to pay for them.

"We won't know if we can live within anticipated revenue until we have a look at each department," DiSalle said.

Wintery Weather Slows Drillers

Continued frigid weather has interfered with moving the oil-drilling rig from the Harold Streitenberger farm and getting it set up and in operation on the Gertrude Long farm, two miles north of Five Points, in Pickaway County.

Reports indicate the rig would be in operation at the new location sometime early this week. The drilling crew is sinking the holes as a part of the Kewanee Oil Co.'s exploratory operation.

Commissioners Schedule Talks On Ditch Work

Waddell Project
On Agenda at Afternoon Session

The Fayette County Board of Commissioners were to hold a joint meeting with the Clinton County Commissioners Monday afternoon to receive the estimate of County Engineer Charles Wagner on the cost of improvements sought on the Waddell joint county ditch.

Proposed changes are to extend for approximately 2.13 miles through Concord Township, plus .75 of a mile of the Rhone mus Branch Ditch, then running through a part of Range Township in Clinton County.

Wagner said that the estimate for the work of grubbing, clearing, straightening and deepening the ditch amounts to approximately $12,000.

Commissioners said that the acceptance of this estimate and setting a date for the final hearing to be attended by property owners subject to the costs, will be the only action at the meeting.

COMMISSIONERS have another joint ditch hearing before them here at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday when they meet with Madison County Commissioners on the proposed three-mile improvement of the Brock Joint County Ditch.

At their meeting Monday morning the county commissioners received a report from Wagner on a request to install flasher danger light signals at the B & O Railway Crossing at Madison Mills on the Harrison Rd., a short distance west of where the CCC Highway passes through that village.

It was decided that the engineer should make a survey during the next few days to determine the amount of traffic using the crossing in order to determine the need for installation of the signal lights. It has been reported that the traffic is heavy at this crossing.

All other matters before the commissioners Monday were routine, including approval of bills.

Dairy Profit Depends on Cows, Claim

Six Fayette Countians were those at the Winter Dairy Day Saturday in Plumb Hall at Ohio State University. The day was planned by the Ohio Dairyman's Assn.

The morning session was devoted to the business meeting of the association. It was followed at noon by lunch served by the Dairy Science Club of the university.

The afternoon program was devoted to the topic "How Large Must a Dairy Farmer's Herd Be To Have a Profitable Enterprise?" A panel of dairymen, who discussed this question, concluded that several factors were more important than size. They listed production per cow, efficiency per unit, producing good crops, particularly hay and grain, and an all around good manager as necessary ingredients for success in the dairy business.

PROFESSOR Raymond Albrecht, dairy farmer and instructor at Cornell University, was the featured speaker of the afternoon. He suggested that the logical herd size at the present time for the best dairy operation, was one of the 25 to 40 cows. He stated that many efficiency factors contributed to this size operation as being the most profitable. He suggested that each dairy should strive for 200,000 pounds of milk per year. Prof. Albrecht listed some figures, showing that in New York a herd of cows averaging 8,500 pounds of milk per year would make a labor income of $10 per cow per year. In comparison, a herd of cows with an average production of 10,700 pounds of milk would return a labor income of $35 per cow per year and a herd with an average production of 12,900 pounds of milk would produce an average of $78 per cow per year. He also said that to get a net income of $1,000, a dairy herd would have to have 1,000 cows, producing 8,500 pounds of milk, or 30 cows producing 10,700 pounds of milk, or only 13 cows producing 12,900 pounds of milk.

Fayette Countians attending the meeting included Mr. and Mrs. Loren Greene, John McFadden, Albert Caplinger, Frank Dill and County Extension Agent Phil Grover.

Warren Michael, is the name chosen by Mr. and Mrs. Warren B. Williams Jr., Jeffersonville, for their son born Thursday in Memorial Hospital.

Dairy Profit Depends on Cows, Claim

Six Fayette Countians were those at the Winter Dairy Day Saturday in Plumb Hall at Ohio State University. The day was planned by the Ohio Dairyman's Assn.

The morning session was devoted to the business meeting of the association. It was followed at noon by lunch served by the Dairy Science Club of the university.

The afternoon program was devoted to the topic "Hoy Large Must a Dairy Farmer's Herd Be To Have a Profitable Enterprise?" A panel of dairymen, who discussed this question, concluded that several factors were more important than size. They listed production per cow, efficiency per unit, producing good crops, particularly hay and grain, and an all around good manager as necessary ingredients for success in the dairy business.

PROFESSOR Raymond Albrecht, dairy farmer and instructor at Cornell University, was the featured speaker of the afternoon. He suggested that the logical herd size at the present time for the best dairy operation, was one of the 25 to 40 cows. He stated that many efficiency factors contributed to this size operation as being the most profitable. He suggested that each dairy should strive for 200,000 pounds of milk per year. Prof. Albrecht listed some figures, showing that in New York a herd of cows averaging 8,500 pounds of milk per year would make a labor income of $10 per cow per year. In comparison, a herd of cows with an average production of 10,700 pounds of milk would return a labor income of $35 per cow per year and a herd with an average production of 12,900 pounds of milk would produce an average of $78 per cow per year. He also said that to get a net income of $1,000, a dairy herd would have to have 1,000 cows, producing 8,500 pounds of milk, or 30 cows producing 10,700 pounds of milk, or only 13 cows producing 12,900 pounds of milk.

Fayette Countians attending the meeting included Mr. and Mrs. Loren Greene, John McFadden, Albert Caplinger, Frank Dill and County Extension Agent Phil Grover.

Pipe-Thawing Blamed for Fire

Clothing Destroyed
In Residence Blaze

A blowtorch being used to thaw water pipes in a Paint St. home Sunday evening exploded, starting a fire in the residence which resulted in the loss of all the occupants' clothes, firemen said.

William Reed, 1221 E. Paint st., turned his back on the blowtorch and it exploded, hurling flames throughout the room, firemen said. The fire had caused considerable damage to the house before the fire department was able to quench it.

There were no injuries, and fire department officials declined to estimate the loss.

FIREMEN also answered a call from 1029 N. North St. Monday morning where a blaze of undetermined origin destroyed part of the garage there.

The fire was put out five minutes after firemen arrived but before it destroyed some tools and other equipment belonging to Virgil Milburn.
